1. Introduction : The Reality on the Ground

The year 2025 was not just about upward trend graphs and empty rhetoric. For MboMa & Co, it was a time of stark confrontation with operational reality.

This year, we faced serious challenges: employees who sometimes hampered initiatives out of fear or inertia, deployments that failed despite weeks of preparation, critical data losses that had to be urgently restored, and periods of intense stress where sleep became a luxury. We dealt with anxious clients calling us at 3 a.m. for reassurances about the stability of their systems.

systems.

Each mission revealed its own constraints: limited infrastructure, fragmented data, fluctuating partner needs, and the absolute necessity of securing and ensuring the reliability of ecosystems. Far from discouraging us, these experiences forged our identity. They strengthened our ability to offer solutions that are not generic, but tailored, resilient, and truly value-creating. This report is not simply a summary of our successes; it is a testament to our ability to weather the storm.

2. Strategic Pillars and Projects Undertaken

A. Strategic Support & Audit

In an environment often characterized by data fragmentation, we have worked with public and private organizations to structure their vision. Our expertise has been sought at the highest levels, notably by the Ministry of Defense for the implementation of a veteran identification system. In this context, our president, Charmant Nyungu K., worked within the company Génie Solution as a technological innovation expert, guiding strategic choices regarding the technologies to adopt, specific development, and critical infrastructure security.

Furthermore, a fruitful collaboration has been established with the Tumone Group SARLU. Charmant Nyungu K. acted as an external consultant for the audit and compliance of several solutions developed by the group. This relationship of trust has solidified to the point that the Tumone Group has already renewed its contract for the 2026 fiscal year with new strategic assignments.

B. Software Engineering and Sustainable Mobility

We have designed platforms capable of working where others fail. This mastery of complexity allowed us to support LUQUAV SARL in the implementation of their Super Mobile App dedicated to monitoring and managing construction sites across the country.

Similarly, we have put our know-how at the service of PADEC, a reference platform for the Congolese diaspora, by digitizing all of their processes and infrastructures to facilitate entrepreneurship and real estate management for Congolese abroad.

This expertise has also led us to collaborate with eNkamba Group SA, a leader in sustainable technology solutions. Together, we work on projects with a strong social and economic impact, extending our reach not only in Africa, but also in the West.

C. Artificial Intelligence: Clara AI and Innovation

Faced with the "all-ChatGPT" trend, we maintained a firm position: AI must be a lever for expertise. This vision led to the creation of Clara AI.

A revolutionary LLM model with vision-based learning. Capable of sorting up to 1 million resumes per minute and automating video interviews based on semantic, predictive, and neural network analysis, Clara AI has already been acquired by major local organizations. Our goal now is to democratize it through direct API integration.

HR, Security and Large-Scale Partnerships Department

Managing the human factor and security has been a core priority for us. We have deployed cutting-edge systems for various local companies, including AI-assisted video surveillance, facial recognition, and digital biometrics. Our strategic partners include Global Solution (Lubumbashi), with whom we have collaborated on large-scale projects (which remain confidential for contractual reasons).

5. Conclusion and Vision 2026

The year 2025 was marked by challenges met and valuable lessons learned. Building on these successes, we approach 2026 with undiminished ambition and a clear strategy: to place people at the heart of the digital transformation.

We remain convinced that technology must serve the development of communities, not the other way around. Integrity will be our ally, loyalty our partner, and determination our motivation. This motto will guide our every step toward achieving our transformation goals for 2026.
